

strip tease

For comfort, convenience, and camouflage, sometimes the best ties are ones you make yourself. Cloth, or even “pleather,” purchased from a fabric store, about two yards long and cut into four-inch widths and folded over, is perfect. These ties can even be hemmed to prevent unraveling. When knotted and pulled tight, however, these can be hard to untie, so remember your slipknots. Leather and imitation leather can be used to hold metal O-rings at various bondage points along the limb, like makeshift manacles.

Ribbon, in a multitude of widths and colors, is a very festive way to tie up a loved one, making a lovely wrapped package. Some insist on at least 250 thread count for strength—the higher the thread count, the finer the quality and softness of the ribbon. I have at least two widths at my disposal: 3/4" and 1/4". The wider lends itself to most bondage situations, although you may want to take special care to “slip” your knots, for unless you do, ribbon is best untied with a knife. O-rings tied in place with ribbons are an elegant substitute for the manacle material listed above. Thinner ribbon works well on fingers and toes and is great for weaving a bundle of joy around your male masochist’s member.

clothes stake the man

In a pinch, any long, soft article of clothing can be used for tying purposes. Stockings, preferably ones that are already ruined, are decent for this, and it will give your man a chance to be bound in something that earlier caressed your